INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER 1
PURPOSE AND SCOPE

1. Purpose

a. This manual provides all published order of battle (OB) information on the Aggressor Armed Forces as of 31 March 1960. It is intended for use in developing Aggressor order of battle data for training exercises and as an aid to training in order of battle intelligence. Master files containing complete OB on all Aggressor units are prepared and maintained by the US Army Aggressor Center, USCONARC, Fort Riley, Kansas.

b. Personnel using this manual are expected to apply the principles and techniques used in the production and dissemination of order of battle intelligence (FM 30–19). They should also be familiar with the contents of FM 30–101, FM 30–101A, FM 30–102, and other publications concerned with the employment of Aggressor as a maneuver enemy.

c. Changes to this order of battle manual will be published as changes in the Aggressor Armed Forces occur.

2. Scope

The order of battle information in this manual is presented in four parts, consisting of an explanation of the organization of this manual and background on the Aggressor nation and its military history; identified ground organizations; identified air and naval organizations; and reference data.

a. Part One, Introduction.

(1) Purpose and Scope (ch. 1).

(2) General (ch. 2). Information in this chapter consists of several definitions, the basic elements of Aggressor order of battle and their usage, types of units and the designation system employed, and notes on the use of this manual.

(3) History of the Aggressor Nation (ch. 3). This chapter depicts establishment of the Aggressor nation; its political, social, and economic structure; the origin and development of the Armed

b. Part Two, Identified Ground Organizations.

(1) Major Ground Units (ch. 4). These include all identified regional commands, army groups, armies, and divisions. Unit designations, commanders and key staff officers, locations, code names, AFPO numbers, and unit histories are indicated for units of each echelon. For divisions, additional data is listed which consists of identified subordinate units and, if known, the commanders and AFPO numbers.

(2) Other Ground Units (chs. 5 and 6). Army ground units smaller than division size are listed by branch of service under two main headings: divisional units and nondivisional units. The divisional units with respective parent organization of each, if known, are listed in chapter 5. Such information as the commander and AFPO number of each divisional unit, when known, may be found under the parent organization in chapter 4. Nondivisional units are listed in chapter 6.

c. Part Three, Identified Air Force and Naval Organizations.

(1) Major Air Force Units (ch. 7). These include all identified Aggressor air armies, corps, and divisions. Unit designations, commanders and key staff officers, locations, code names, AFPO numbers, and unit histories are indicated for units of each echelon. For divisions, additional data is listed which consists of identified subordinate units and, if known, the commanders and AFPO numbers.

(2) Other Air Force and Naval Units (ch. 8). Units smaller than division size are listed by type of unit under three headings: air force divisional flying units, air force nondivisional units, and Naval units. Subordination of known units, in keeping with the system employed for the listing of ground units, may be found in section I for divisional flying units, in section II for nondivisional units, and section III for Naval units.

d. Part Four, Reference Data.

(1) Location of Major Organizations of the Aggressor Armed Forces (ch. 9). This chapter contains the last known location of major identified organizations of the Aggressor Armed Forces. Aggressor units of division size and larger identified in the Homeland are listed under the army group area in which they are located; those located overseas are listed under the appropriate occupation areas.

(2) Code Names (ch. 10). This chapter contains a compilation of unit code names shown elsewhere in this manual.

(3) Armed Forces Post Office Numbers (ch. 11). This chapter contains a list of Aggressor Armed Forces post office (AFPO) numbers. Only the AFPO numbers which have been identified with an organization are listed.

(4) Roster of Aggressor Officers (ch. 12). This chapter contains an alphabetical roster of identified commanders and key staff officers of the Aggressor Armed Forces. When known, data on age, rank, date of rank, branch, present assignment, previous assignments, schools attended, decorations and awards, and campaign ribbons are included.

GENERAL

3. Definitions

a. Regional Command. May be organized to control operations in a particular area and consists of two or more army groups. The regional command is controlled by the Ministry of the Armed Forces.

b. Army Group. Normally consists of four combined arms armies, a tank army, an air army, four mixed artillery divisions, three gun artillery divisions. a missile division (light), a missile division (medium), two antiaircraft artillery divisions, a heavy artillery brigade, a rocket artillery brigade, six antitank artillery brigades, and army group support units. The army group, unless part of a regional command, is controlled by the Ministry of the Armed Forces.

c. Military District. An administrative subdivision of the Aggressor Homeland in which the Military District Headquarters performs assigned functions as a territorial command and as a training headquarters under the HEJMKOMANDO (Home Command). See paragraph 5*a*(2)(a), paragraph 12, and figure 3.

d. Armed Forces Post Office (AFPO) Number. A number, similar to the United States APO number, arbitrarily allotted to each unit having a separate identity such as a division, the organic units of a division, and separate nondivisional units. AFPO numbers are also allotted to the major elements of brigades and larger organizations. These numbers generally remain constant.

e. Code Name. An identifying name given to regional commands, army groups, armies, divisions, and separate (nondivisional) brigades.

4. Elements of Aggressor Order of Battle

a. General. The basic elements of the order of battle of the Aggressor Armed Forces are presented in this manual in a series of compilations designed to provide cross-references or guides to assist in the identification of units (FM 30–19). Aids used in determining the identification of units of the Aggressor Armed Forces are the unit designation, commander's name, code name, and Armed Forces post office (AFPO) number. For example, an Aggressor soldier during proper interrogation may refer to his unit, the 96th Mechanized Rifle Regiment, by its official designation (the 96th Mechanized Rifle Regiment), by the commander's name (the JUGOVICH Unit), or by the Armed Forces post office number (the 15606 unit). The use of various listings in determining Aggressor order of battle is discussed in b through d below.

b. Commander's Name.

(1) General. The names of commanders are useful to identify units. Personal names have been used informally to designate regional commands, army groups, armies, and divisions, as well as task forces, regiments, battalions, and companies. Frequently, even platoons and squads are referred to by the leader's name. Personal names of commanders in the Aggressor Armed Forces are often used in diaries, notebooks, personal and official mail, and prisoner of war interrogations.

(2) Example. A captured document refers to a unit as the "VALLEJO Unit," and a prisoner of war states that he is a member of a reconnaissance unit commanded by "Commandant VALLEJO." The roster of Aggressor officers identifies Commandant VALLEJO as the last known commander of the 315th Fusilier Reconnaissance Battalion.

c. Code Names.

(1) General. Code names are assigned to regional commands, army groups, armies, divisions, and separate (nondivisional) brigades. All organic units of a separate (nondivisional) brigade or division share the code name of the parent unit. Nondivisional units, other than brigades, use the code name of the unit to which they are assigned. Experience indicates that code names of major organizations are usually permanent. Separate (nondivisional) units, other than brigades, however, change code names whenever their assignment or attachment is changed. Code names are usually single words, and are selected under no identifiable system. For security reasons, Aggressor units in the field are frequently referred to by code name only.

(2) Example. A captured Aggressor document may refer to the "PATRIOTO Unit." Since Aggressor units are often referred to by the name of the commander, both the roster of Aggressor officers and the list of code names should be checked. The roster of officers does not contain an officer named PATRIOTO, but the list of code names indicates that PATRIOTO is the code name of the 33d Tank Division. Therefore, the unit to which the captured document refers is the 33d Tank Division.

d. Armed Forces Post Office (AFPO) Numbers.

(1) General. The Aggressor Armed Forces have frequently used five-digit Armed Forces post office numbers in an apparent effort to conceal the identity of units. An AFPO number has been found to be a means of unit identification. The system of AFPO numbers employed by Aggressor has not been definitely ascertained.

(2) AFPO numbering system.

(a) The Aggressor High Command allotted a block of AFPO numbers to each major component of the Aggressor Armed Forces. It appears that AFPO numbers in the 00001, 10000, 20000, 30000, and 50000 series are assigned to the Army High Command, the 40000 series to the Air Force High Command, and the 60000 series to the Navy High Command.

(b) It appears that the AFPO number initially assigned to a unit seldom changes. However, because of reorganization or reassignment of units, changes in AFPO numbers occasionally occur. It is uncertain under what conditions units transferred from one major unit to another change AFPO numbers. Newly discovered AFPO numbers should be checked constantly with existing AFPO identification.

(3) Army High Command (ground units). The AFPO numbers allotted to the Army High Command (00001–39999 and 50000–59999) are suballotted to major echelons of the Army. However, there does not appear to be an established sequence for the assignment of a series or block of AFPO numbers to the HEJMKOMANDO (Home Command), regional commands, and army groups. This is probably due to the extensive reorganization and reassignment throughout the Army caused by the latest Armed Forces reorganization program.

(4) Air Force High Command (air units). The AFPO numbers allotted to the air forces (40000–49999) are suballotted to the air armies. There does not appear to be an established sequence for the assignment of a series or block of AFPO numbers to the respective air armies. The reason for this is probably due to the extensive reorganization and reassignment throughout the air forces caused by the latest Armed Forces reorganization program.

(5) Navy High Command (naval units). Information on the AFPO numbers used by the Navy High Command is limited; it will be published as obtained. To date, they appear to be in the 60000 to 69999 block.

(6) Example: The AFPO number 15606 is disclosed by a prisoner of war. Reference to the list of AFPO numbers determines that the AFPO number 15606 is assigned to the 96th Mechanized Rifle Regiment.

(7) Sample Addresses.

5. Types of Units and Designation System

a. Army High Command.

(1) Types of units.

(a) Aggressor ground units are identifiable by the branch or other special designation in the title.
Example: 1 Tank Army, 9 Tank Division, 342 Reconnaissance Battalion. For types of Aggressor Army units, see the current edition of FM 30–102.

(b) The term "fusilier," a designation of elite troops, is awarded to any type army or division (except airborne, already considered elite) which distinguishes itself in battle. "Fusilier" is used in combination with the name of the type army or division so designated.
Example: 11 Fusilier Tank Army, 4 Fusilier Mechanized Rifle Division, and 31 Fusilier Tank Division. Fusilier units below division level are frequently designated with the letter F, e.g., 202F Mecz Rifle Regt.

(2) Designation system. BOTH ESPERANTO AND ENGLISH ARE USED IN THE DESIGNATION SYSTEM (par. 411). THE USE OF ESPERANTO INCREASES THE REALISM AND IMPROVES INTELLIGENCE TRAINING. A certain pattern is noticeable in the numbering of Aggressor ground units, although no rule has been established that applies in all cases. Many exceptions are evident as a result of inactivation, conversion to other types of units, for other less common reasons, or for no apparent reason at all. WHEN MILITARY SYMBOLS ARE USED FOR REGIONAL COMMANDS, ARMY GROUPS, AND ARMIES, THE UNIT DESIGNATION MAY APPEAR EITHER INSIDE OR TO THE RIGHT OF THE SYMBOL BLOCK.

(a) Home Command. The Aggressor Home Command is designated in Esperanto, the official language of Aggressor, HEJMKOMANDO. See figure 3 and paragraph 411.

(b) Regional Commands. There are two known regional commands in the Aggressor Armed Forces that are designated by the region name in Esperanto as Regional Command ATLANTIKO and Regional Command PACIFIKO. (figs. 1 and 8, and par. 411.)

(c) Army groups. Known army groups are designated by the area name in Esperanto as Army Group NORDO, SUDO, ORIENTO, OKCIDENTO, KARIBO, GOLFO, ST. LAURENCO, KALIFORNIO, KOLOMBIO, and AZIO. See figures 1, 4–7, 9–16, and paragraph 411.

Examples:

(d) Armies. Armies are designated by Arabic numerals or spelled out in conjunction with the following systems:

1. Combined arms army. Combined arms armies are numbered from 1 through 38; however, all 38 numbers have not been identified. Combined arms armies are frequently referred to without using the words "combined arms," e.g., 5th Army or FIFTH Army.
   Examples:

2. Tank army. Tank armies are numbered in a series from 1 through 16; however, all 16 numbers have not been identified. Tank armies are referred to by using the word "tank," e.g., 3d Tank Army or THIRD Tank Army.
   Examples:

(e) Divisions. Each type division is numbered in its own series beginning with the number 1, except mixed artillery divisions and gun artillery divisions. Mixed and gun artillery divisions are numbered in the same series, e.g., the 5th Mixed Artillery Division has been identified, therefore, there cannot be a 5th Gun Artillery Division.

(f) Organic Brigades. The organic brigades of divisions, armies, and army groups are designated by Arabic numerals and branch or type of equipment.
Examples:

19 Gun-How Bde (203mm), 5 Mixed Arty Div
201 Arty Bde (SP), 1 Tank Army
34 Engr Bde, Army Group NORDO

(g) Organic Regiments. The organic regiments of brigades, divisions, armies, and army groups are designated by Arabic numerals and branch or type of equipment.

Examples:

239 Gun Regt (130mm), 510 Arty Bde
141 Mecz Rifle Regt, 30 Mecz Rifle Div
903 Cml Regt, 7 Army
501 Sig Comm Regt, Army Group KALIFORNIO

(h) Organic Battalions. The organic battalions of regiments, brigades, divisions, armies, and army groups are designated by Arabic and Roman numerals and/or by branch or type of equipment. If two or more battalions with the same organization are organic to a regiment or brigade, generally Roman numerals are used to designate the battalions. However, if one or more different type battalions are organic to a regiment, generally these battalions are not designated with numerals; only the branch or type of equipment is indicated. Battalions not in the two categories mentioned are designated by Arabic numerals.

Examples:

I Mecz Rifle Bn, 545 Mecz Rifle Regt
II M Tk Bn, 280 M Tk Regt
M Tk Bn, 545 Mecz Rifle Regt
AA Bn, 545 Mecz Rifle Regt
38 Prcht Rifle Bn, 18 Abn Prcht Regt
III Msl Bn (TONDRO), 234 Msl Bde (TONDRO)
110 Rkt Bn (280mm), 14 Rkt Bde
188 Sig Bn, 71 Tk Div
4 Ski Bn, 7 Army
73 Pgnd Bn, Army Group GOLFO

(i) Organic Companies, Batteries, and Troops. The organic companies, batteries, and troops of battalions, regiments, brigades, divisions, armies, and army groups are designated by Arabic numerals and/or branch or type of equipment.

Examples:

1 Mecz Rifle Co, III Mecz Rifle Bn, 141 Mecz Rifle Regt
Hq & Svc Co, III Mecz Rifle Bn, 141 Mecz Rifle Regt
MG Co, III Mecz Rifle Bn, 141 Mecz Rifle Regt
Hq & Svc Btry, 24 Rkt Lchr Bn
Hq Co, 141 Mecz Rifle Regt
Sig Co, 141 Mecz Rifle Regt
Hq & Svc Btry, 201 Arty Bde (SP)
Hq Co, 37 Mecz Rifle Div
Hq & Hq Trps, 5 Army
915 Pgnd Co, 20 Army
Hq & Hq Trps, Army Group KARIBO
655 Sig Comm Intcp Co, Army Group KOLOMBIO

(j) Organic Platoons. The organic platoons of companies, batteries, and troops are designated by Arabic numerals and/or type of equipment.

Examples:

3 Rifle Plat, 1 Abn Rifle Co
MG Plat, 1 Abn Rifle Co
Hq Plat, 1 Abn Rifle Co

b. Air Force High Command.

(1) Types of units. All Aggressor air force units are identifiable by the type of aircraft in the title. For types of Aggressor air units see the current edition of FM 30–102.

(2) Assignment. Experience indicates that the assignment of air divisions and corps is changed more frequently than for ground divisions. It is believed that control of all nondivisional aviation units has been centralized within the Air Force High Command and that these units are detached to subordinate organizations for specific missions, both in the Homeland and in overseas areas.

(3) Designation system. A certain pattern is noticeable in the numbering of Aggressor air units, but no rule can be established that is applicable in all cases. Many exceptions are indicated as a result of inactivation, conversion to other type units, for other less common reasons, or for no apparent reason at all.

(a) Armies. Armies are designated by Arabic numerals, for instance, "6th Air Army."

(b) Corps. Corps are designated in a continuing series of Arabic numerals, regardless of type. For example, if there is a 10th Fighter Corps, there cannot be a 10th Attack Corps.

(c) Divisions. Divisions are generally numbered in the series 1–100, without regard to the type of division.

(d) Nondivisional units. Nondivisional units seem to follow no pattern in their numbering.

6. Use of This Publication

CHAPTER 3
HISTORY OF THE AGGRESSOR NATION

7. Establishment of the Aggressor Nation

The Aggressor nation arose out of the chaotic conditions which characterized many areas of the world at the end of World War II. The collapse and surrender of the Axis Powers was followed by large-scale withdrawals of Allied troops from the areas of recent conflict. Such withdrawals produced almost immediately a military and political vacuum. Into this situation stepped a small group of unscrupulous and ambitious men, determined to seize control over these torn, unsettled areas and to use it as a springboard for the eventual conquest of the entire world. To attain their objective, they created a totalitarian political organization, known as the "Circle Trigon Party." Its nucleus, the Central Committee, comprised the party leadership. The Central Committee, in turn, elected a triumvirate to serve at the helm of the party. After a difficult struggle, the "Triumvirate" gained uncontested control within the Central Committee and exercised absolute power within the Circle Trigon Party.

By late 1945, the leaders of the party had established the Aggressor nation. During the winter of 1945–1946, they proceeded to consolidate their position in the large landmass of the Aggressor Homeland. They placed their trusted lieutenants in all key governmental positions, so that the government, in effect, was completely controlled by the party leadership. Control over the government, in turn, enabled the party to exercise a firm grip on the fledgling Armed Forces of the new nation. Party and government control also extended to industry and commerce, agriculture, organized labor, the media of information, the arts and sciences, and the field of education. By the summer of 1946, the "Triumvirate," through its various organs of control, dominated every walk of life within the Aggressor nation.

8. Political, Social, and Economic Structure

a. Form of Government. The titular head of the Aggressor nation is the President. He is elected by the single-chamber legislature, "The Chamber of Councillors," but actually handpicked by the "Triumvirate." The presidency is invariably handed to a veteran Circle Trigonist, who has no governmental powers and merely represents the nation at official and ceremonial functions.

The chief executive of the government is the Minister President, who is nominated by the President. The actual selection is made by the "Triumvirate" and dictated to the President. Approval of the appointment by the legislature, as required by the Aggressor Constitution, is a formality.

The Minister President is usually a high-ranking member of the party's Central Committee. During recent years, he has performed a dual role as chief executive and member of the "Triumvirate." He selects the members of his cabinet or ministers as directed by the "Triumvirate." Except for a small number of experts, all cabinet ministers and key personnel of the various ministries are members or candidates of the party's Central Committee or hold high rank at the national level of the Circle Trigon Party.

The Aggressor Constitution vests legislative powers in the aforementioned "Chamber of Councillors." The legislature, however, is convened infrequently. Actual legislative powers are exercised by the "Triumvirate" and Central Committee through their representatives in the government. During the infrequent sessions of the legislature, new legislation is submitted by the members of the government and rubber-stamped by the "Chamber of Councillors."

The Judiciary at the national level is appointed by the Minister President as directed by the "Triumvirate." Since it enjoys no independence, it can be employed to further the political ends of the state, such as giving judicial approval to purging political enemies of the Circle Trigon Party. Trial by jury is unknown. Trials may be held in secret "in the interests of national security."

Governmental control is highly centralized. Certain key ministries control every segment of the nation's economic and manpower resources within their area of responsibility. The Ministries for Light and Heavy Industry, for instance, control the nation's industrial output and channel a large percentage into the military effort. The Ministry of Internal Affairs, in addition to its conventional functions, exercises police power, controls the security forces, and operates forced labor camps and penal colonies throughout the nation.

Local government reflects the structure of the national government, except in instances where powers are reserved exclusively to the national government. Local governmental officials are either furnished or controlled by the local leaders of the Circle Trigon Party.

Functions of government at any level are marked by impressive ritual. A prominent display of uniforms, Circle Trigon banners, and similar trappings can be viewed at any Government or party-sponsored ceremony. Speeches and slogans, proclaiming "Peace," "Democracy," "The Rights of the People," and "Loyalty to the Ideals of the Party," can be heard and seen throughout the Homeland. The "Triumvirate" uses such trappings and propaganda to arouse nationalism among the people, and to deceive them as to the true political and military objectives of the regime.

b. The Circle Trigon Party. Although there is no clear dividing line between the party and Government, it must be emphasized that the party is the true source of power. It ruthlessly pursues its main objectives of internal consolidation and world domination. To attain the former, the party employs brute force, exploits age-old traditions and nationalistic feelings, offers blandishments, and instills fear and distrust in the Aggressor people. In aiming for world domination, Aggressor wages military campaigns, preceded by political and economic penetration.

The Circle Trigon Party of the Homeland controls the activities of the Circle Trigon Parties of other nations in furtherance of its political and military objectives. The Homeland Party expects its sister parties to profess loyalty and strict adherence to the Homeland "Party Line." Circle Trigonist dissenters at home and abroad are disciplined or purged.

In the Homeland, membership in the Circle Trigon Party is confined to a hard core of party stalwarts, amounting to no more than 5 percent of the total population. The populace, however, is thoroughly indoctrinated with the Aggressor political philosophy and supports it by reason of fear or conviction. Members of the "Triumvirate" and other Circle Trigonist "heroes" are admired and often idolized.

Lately, the "Triumvirate," because of inter-party struggles and some economic unrest, has modified its harsh regime and made some concessions to the populace. Another factor which may have contributed to the adoption of a softer policy was the death in 1955 of Emilio Grandafrato, formerly the ruling member of the "Triumvirate" and virtual dictator of the Aggressor nation. It is, however, expected that another "strong man" will emerge from the Central Committee or "Triumvirate" and terminate the present committee-type rule.

c. The Aggressor People. The population of the Aggressor Homeland reached the two-hundred-million mark in 1955. Since then, the growth of the population has continued because of the increasing birth rate and the acquisition of new territory.

Although the Aggressor people comprise a large variety of ethnic and religious groups, the national objectives proclaimed by their rulers have instilled into them a unity of purpose. Another unifying element was the adoption of Esperanto as the official language. Although Esperanto has not fully supplanted the native tongues of the local areas, it is expected to do so in the course of a few generations.

All religious sects and denominations enjoy almost complete religious freedom, as long as their religious beliefs conform with the principles laid down by the party. Religious bodies at home are largely subservient to the party and Government. Religious organizations abroad often unknowingly serve as a vehicle for infiltrating Circle Trigonist agents into foreign nations.

d. Economic Structure. The Aggressor economy is completely controlled by the state. All industrial and commercial establishments are state-owned and private individuals are prohibited from owning any means of production or distribution. Collectives and state-controlled cooperatives dominate the agricultural field. Farmers, however, may own small plots of ground in order to raise agricultural products for their own use.

Industrial and commercial facilities are either manufacturing or transporting implements of war or else can be converted to support the war effort at short notice. The Aggressor Civil Air Fleet, for example, is under quasi-military control and, in case of military necessity, can be diverted to the Armed Forces. Practically all passenger and cargo aircraft conform to military standards and specifications, so that transfer from civilian to military usage poses no problem. Tractors used in agriculture and commercial trucks can be similarly converted for military usage.

Stockpiling of strategic materials also serves to promote the Aggressor war effort. Although the Armed Forces control and maintain their own central storage depots in the various military districts of the Homeland, they can draw on the reserves of the civilian economy. Such reserves, known as "State Reserves" and administered by a civilian agency, comprise large stockpiles of food products, petroleum, coal and coke, strategic metals, tools and instruments, chemicals, heavy industrial equipment, and various means of transportation.

In addition to military supplies and state reserves, Aggressor maintains industrial mobilization reserves at each industrial plant and factory. These reserves, consisting of machine tools, raw materials, and semi-finished goods, insure the uninterrupted operation of the munitions industry during war and speed up the conversion of other industries to war production.

To maintain and increase the war-making potential of the Aggressor economy, the government supports a huge research and development program. Recent Aggressor advances in the production of nuclear materials and weapons, guided and ballistic missiles, and electronics equipment attest to the success of this program. They also serve notice that Aggressor has attained at least parity in these fields with the United States.

e. Manpower Policies. Aggressor holds that the personal aspirations of the individual must be subservient to the interests of the State. Consequently, the government exploits each individual so as to advance the Aggressor economy and promote the Aggressor war effort.

The nation's manpower has been registered and graded by mental and physical profiles. Persons of high mental caliber are sent to state-supported educational institutions where they are trained to fill key positions in governmental agencies, universities, scientific laboratories, and industrial plants. This so-called "intelligentsia" is accorded an honored role in Aggressor society and competes for the highest social positions with party functionaries, government bureaucrats, and high-ranking Army officers.

A high percentage of the nation's best manpower is channelled into the regular military establishment. Numerous military preparatory schools accept cadets at an early age. An important criterion for selection is the loyalty of the cadet's family to the Circle Trigon Party.

All young men and unmarried women are subject to military service for a period of three years. Most of the inductees have acquired some military skills, such as the firing of small arms, in Circle Trigonist youth organizations and other premilitary societies. Exemption is granted to most university students, persons possessing certain technical skills in industry and agriculturc, and the physically unfit. The latter, however, are required to serve their period of conscription in labor battalions or similar regimented organizations.

Women inducted into the Armed Forces perform clerical and housekeeping functions, or serve in the various technical and administrative services, e.g., Signal, Medical, and Intendance. All other unmarried and many married women work in industry, commerce, and agriculture, where they perform duties ranging from hard menial labor to highly specialized functions.

Political reliability and loyalty to the Circle Trigon Party are criteria for service in the Armed Forces and other than menial positions in industry, commerce, and agriculture. Persons known to be actively or passively opposed to the party are arrested by the Security Police, subjected to secret trials, and sentenced to terms in forced labor camps or penal colonies. The exploitation of forced labor greatly contributes to maintaining the Aggressor economy at its present level.

9. Origin and Development of the Aggressor Armed Forces

The Armed Forces came into being immediately upon the establishment of the Aggressor nation. Disbanded troops of many nations which had participated in World War II hastened to join the Aggressor military and were utilized as a well-balanced professional cadre. Among them were many experienced military leaders who were given positions of responsibility corresponding to their former rank and status.

a. Aggressor Ground Forces. Since their inception, the Aggressor Ground Forces have expanded rapidly and gone through various reorganizations in order to increase their operational flexibility, mobility, and firepower. The first reorganization took place during the years 1952–53. This reorganization witnessed a departure from the centralization of control, which had hamstrung commanders at the lower levels. Rifle divisions, for example, received organic tank and other support elements and were thus able to fight independently over longer periods of time. In essence, this was a vote of confidence for commanders of divisions and divisional units by the Aggressor High Command. The reorganization of 1952–53 was also marked by the introduction of new weapons and equipment with a corresponding increase in firepower and mobility. Horse-drawn transport was largely discarded, but the horse cavalry survived.

The second reorganization of 1955–57 was primarily designed to ready the Aggressor Ground Forces for commitment on the nuclear battlefield. Line divisions were streamlined organizationally and provided with new weapons and equipment. They retained, however, their triangular structure and were subsequently referred to as "tritomic" divisions. GHQ units were also revamped and, in some instances, dropped. Tactical artillery and antiaircraft missile units were activated and placed into service. Horse cavalry divisions were deprived of their horses and transformed into other-type mobile divisions.

The third reorganization began in November 1958 and was completed in 1960. This extensive reorganization program, directed by the Ministry of the Armed Forces, affected the Aggressor Ground, Air, and Naval Forces. The Ground Forces underwent major organizational changes designed to modernize the Army and thereby increase its combat capability. The reorganization resulted in the following important changes: rifle divisions and rifle armies were discarded; the corps echelon in the ground forces was eliminated, except for the airborne corps which may be organized in rare instances; mountain divisions have not been identified since reorganization, however, mountain divisions may be organized as needed; mechanized armies were replaced by combined arms armies; light and medium missile artillery divisions, tank armies, and regional commands were created; and army groups were reorganized and redesignated utilizing Esperanto names. The mechanized rifle division replaced the rifle division as the basic unit for Aggressor tactical operations. The number of mechanized rifle divisions was increased to provide the required ratio of assault units. The tank division was reorganized to increase its combat effectiveness, and it remained the primary unit for shock action and exploitation.

The reorganization of the Aggressor ground forces is continuing. It is believed that the development of new weapons and tactical doctrines is proceeding at such a rapid pace that more far-reaching changes are in the offing.

Aggressor tactical air armies subordinate to the ground forces were reorganized and received new equipment. Tactical air units were reequipped with high-performance jet aircraft. Helicopter units, comprising various types of light, medium, and heavy helicopters, were activated and assigned to the various air armies.

b. Aggressor Air Forces and Navy. The development of the ground forces, by virtue of their numerical strength, had the most far-reaching effect. However, the Aggressor air forces directly subordinate to the Ministry of the Armed Forces and the Aggressor Navy made equally significant advances. The Navy, in particular, continued to expand and modernize its mighty submarine arm. It also built additional surface-combat craft, including missile ships.

These developments enhanced the status of the Aggressor Air Force and Navy within the overall military organization. However, the Army remains the dominant service.

c. Political Weaknesses. Aggressor has made great strides in perfecting the organization and weapons systems of his Armed Forces and in training the individual soldier. These improvements, however, are accompanied by certain weaknesses which are inherent in any totalitarian society. The watchful eye of the party over the Armed Forces, as manifested by the system of political officers, is repugnant to many commanders and their troops. Many of the former, while paying lip service to the "party line," are perfunctory Circle Trigonists. They resent the many party tasks that detract from their professional development and private life. Yet, they dutifully teach the "party line" to the rank and file.

The distrust which the party holds for the military is manifested by the system of informers it has created within the Armed Forces. It is also reflected by the isolation in which Aggressor occupation troops are held abroad. Obviously, these are other factors which detract from sound morale. Finally, while centralized control has been greatly relaxed, the initiative of commanders and troops is more rigidly restricted than that of their counterparts in a free society.

The impressive advances which the individual Aggressor soldier has made in improving his professional knowledge and in acquiring new technical skills mark him as a formidable opponent. On the other hand, bondage restricts his freedom of action and quickness of decision that may mean the difference between victory and defeat on the battlefield.

10. The Development of Aggressor Para-Military Forces

A prominent feature of most totalitarian societies is the existence of a dual military apparatus. In the past, totalitarian powers have refused to rely solely on the regular military establishment. Instead, they have activated military groups fanatically loyal to the ruling party and not subject to control by the Armed Forces. In the Aggressor nation, these forces are known as Security Forces.

The Security Forces are controlled by the Ministry of Internal Affairs. They guard the borders of the Homeland; maintain internal security within the Homeland and in occupied areas; protect important government, party, and industrial buildings; and guard political prisoners. As the ultimate defenders of the regime, they provide the force necessary to insure the internal stability of the Homeland and to suppress uprisings by any segment of the populace, including the Armed Forces.

The emphasis which Aggressor places on military training is reflected in the many organizations designed to prepare young men and women for military service in the Armed Forces. Most of these are connected with the Circle Trigonist Youth Organization. Were a foreign army to invade the Homeland, these organizations could be expected to furnish auxiliaries to the regular Armed Forces and Security Forces.

The world-wide nature of the Circle Trigonist movement enables Aggressor to recruit sympathizers everywhere and to convert them to his purposes. Many adherents of the Circle Trigon Party outside of the Homeland are given military training and utilized in support of Aggressor military operations. In the Aggressor-occupied areas on the North American Continent, the Caribbean, and Southeast Asia, local Circle Trigonists serve in auxiliary units. In this manner, they free tactical units from occupation duty. In some instances, political expediency or military necessity dictates the activation of "International Brigades." These brigades are usually formed from members of local auxiliary units augmented by Circle Trigonist volunteers. Upon completing a cycle of military training, these brigades are committed to combat with regular military contingents. At times, they follow in the wake of an invasion force as non-Aggressor "forces of liberation."

In areas earmarked for occupation or relinquished in the course of a defensive operation, Aggressor makes wide use of partisans. Partisans are usually recruited from Circle Trigonist sympathizers of the local population and augmented by disguised members of the Armed Forces. Wherever possible, the Aggressor army group commander will direct the actvities of these partisans and coordinate their operations with those of his command. In this manner, effective military control of the partisan movement makes it an extension of the regular military establishment.

Normally, the mission and deployment of partisan units will preclude their extensive use in collecting combat intelligence. For this purpose, Aggressor unconventional warfare uses two distinct types of units. One is the long-range patrol, termed the Raid-Intelligence Group, which is airdropped, airlanded or infiltrated into the enemy rear. It seizes and interrogates prisoners and transmits intelligence gained directly by radio to the army, or army group headquarters to which the group is attached. In addition to these overt uniformed groups, covert intelligence groups are trained and equipped to operate espionage nets in enemy rear areas and communicate with parent headquarters. Neither type of group contains more than 12 individuals. Twenty to thirty groups are contained in a brigade at army level. Groups may be attached to lower headquarters for specific operations.

Whenever the Aggressor front advances, flexible underground Circle Trigon Party cells may be expected to advance along with it as "an organized advance guard of the new order." These cells make contact with the local partisan movement and other Circle Trigonist sympathizers and consolidate the position of the party in the occupied area. This concurrent advance of the military and political front is typical of Aggressor expansionism.

11. Aggressor Campaigns

With the development of a strong military establishment supported by a productive economy, Aggressor inaugurated his ambitious plan for world domination by attacking the most powerful nation of the free world, the United States of America.

CAMPAIGNS OF 1946–47.

First California Campaign. In the Fall of 1946, Aggressor seized the Antilles and the Panama Canal. In November 1946, an Aggressor expeditionary force passed through the canal and landed in California. The Aggressor Navy was unequal to the task of protecting supply lines and the California expedition was defeated. Aggressor, however, successfully defended his bases in the Caribbean area.

First Florida Campaign. In the Fall of 1947, the Aggressor Third Army launched a large-scale amphibious assault from its Caribbean bases and overran portions of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. After suffering a serious defeat, the remnants of this Aggressor force were evacuated. Individual Aggressor soldiers remained behind and, aided by Aggressor sympathizers, scattered over the entire United States. Living a clandestine existence, they became advisors and members of subversive groups and partisan organizations.

First St. Lawrence Campaign. In late September 1947, Aggressor launched a joint amphibious and airborne invasion across the North Atlantic. By the winter of that year, Aggressor held all of New England and the St. Lawrence River area, and had driven a wedge southwest through New York State to the general line BUFFALO-SCRANTON-ALBANY-NEW HAVEN.

CAMPAIGNS OF 1948–49.

First Tennessee-Kentucky Campaign. Aggressor continued to build up military strength in the Caribbean. Emphasis was placed on preparations for airborne invasions. During this period, Aggressor sympathizers in the United States grew in numbers. The tempo of subversive incidents increased and reached a climax in an open attack in the Tennessee-Kentucky area by a partisan group known as the "Green Brigade." The attack began in April 1948 as a series of raids on the supplies and weapons stored at Fort Campbell, Ky. The Green Brigade captured the airfield and laid seige to the post itself. As the United States launched an attack against these partisan forces, Aggressor forces from the Caribbean executed a successful airborne landing in Tennessee. The U.S. Air Force, however, disrupted Aggressor air action and blocked the followup airlift. As a result, the Aggressor airborne force was annihilated. The Green Brigade ceased to exist as a unit, but many of its members rejoined the Circle Trigonist underground.

First Caribbean Defense. In the Spring of 1949, critical shipping losses in the Atlantic prompted the United States to launch a limited attack against Aggressor Caribbean installations. On 2 March, joint amphibious

U.S. forces landed on the Island of Vieques, destroyed submarine pens there and at nearby San Juan, Puerto Rico, and then withdrew according to plan.

First Carolina Campaign. As if in retaliation for the assault against Puerto Rico, Aggressor Caribbean forces executed an airborne invasion of the United States early in May 1949. The initial attack resulted in the Aggressor seizure of Pope Air Force Base and the Fort Bragg, N. C. area. The U.S. Air Force gained air superiority, but not until after Aggressor had airlanded an entire corps. The arrival of strong U.S. reinforcements compelled Aggressor to withdraw.

Hawaiian Campaign. Late in May 1949, Aggressor launched an amphibious attack against the Hawaiian Islands. The United States, heavily committed in the East, mustered its small garrison and hastily mobilized local National Guard units in order to repel the attack. These forces put up stubborn resistance, but by 19 June, Aggressor was in control of the entire island group. The United States immediately organized a joint amphibious task force, which assaulted Oahu on 25 October and completely recaptured the islands by mid-November.

First Alaskan Campaign. Aggressor losses on the Hawaiian Archipelago were relatively light because the size of the occupation force had been reduced prior to the United States counterinvasion. While in possession of the Hawaiian Islands, the Aggressor High Command decided to use them as a springboard for an Alaskan invasion in order to render the northern flank of the United States vulnerable. On 4 October 1949, Aggressor Task Force SCHNEE departed from Hilo, Hawaii, and made an amphibious landing in the vicinity of Anchorage, Alaska. By mid-February, Aggressor units had advanced beyond Northway. Subsequent combined operations of the U.S. and Allied forces pushed Aggressor back from the Alaskan mainland to the Aleutians.

CAMPAIGNS OF 1950.

Second Florida Campaign. In 1950, Aggressor renewed his attack on the continental United States. From 20 to 31 January, 1950, Aggressor bombed major U.S. cities, military installations, and airfields. Airfields in Florida were hit particularly hard. On 1 February, Aggressor launched a successful airborne and amphibious invasion of Florida. Aggressor's use of the Greater Antilles chain as a base of operations against the United States mainland and against U.S. shipping sped U.S. plans for another attack on Aggressor Caribbean bases.

Second Caribbean Defense. On 15 March 1950, a joint U.S. Army-Navy task force launched another attack on Vieques, quickly overran the Aggressor defenders, destroyed glider assembly plants and submarine bases, and then withdrew according to plan.

Southeastern United States Campaign. To assist the Florida offensive, the Aggressor High Command launched a second joint airborne and amphibious attack against the United States. In March 1950, Aggressor, with complete air superiority over the Southeastern United States, landed an airborne force in the vicinity of Fort Bragg, N. C. This force, after reinforcement by Aggressor air-transported troops, quickly captured Fort Bragg, Pope Air Force Base, and nearby towns. Simultaneously, Aggressor landed an amphibious task force in the vicinity of Wilmington, N. C., and advanced towards Fort Bragg to effect a link-up with the Aggressor forces in that area. In April, the United States regained air superiority over this sector and the U.S. ground forces launched a successful counterattack. By the end of May, the remnants of the Aggressor forces which could not be evacuated had been mopped up. In the meantime, the Aggressor invasion of Florida had been stopped along the general line JACKSONVILLE-TALLAHASSEE-APALACHICOLA.

Southeast Asia Campaign. At the same time that Aggressor attempted to consolidate his position on the North American Continent, he embarked on a series of campaigns to "liberate" several of the former European colonial areas in Asia. By late April, Aggressor had seized North Vietnam, Laos, and portions of South Vietnam, and subsequently brought in his Tenth Army to serve as an occupation force.

CAMPAIGNS OF 1951–52.

Second Carolina Campaign. In 1951, Aggressor again attacked the United States. A reinforced mechanized army made a successful amphibious landing in the Charleston, South Carolina, area on 11 July 1951. The invaders pushed inland to Fort Bragg, N. C., where they were stopped by U.S. forces. Subsequently, a U.S. airborne force dropped behind Aggressor lines and forced an Aggressor withdrawal to the MYRTLE BEACH-CHARLESTON beachhead line.

Second St. Lawrence Campaign. Simultaneously with the Carolina operation, Aggressor forces in the New Brunswick-Nova Scotia-Labrador area launched a major offensive west and southwest along the St. Lawrence Valley. With many U.S. units withdrawn to reinforce the Fort Bragg, N. C., area, Aggressor was able to capture Quebec in 15 days. After a temporary halt, Aggressor resumed the offensive on 27 August 1951. By February 1952, a mechanized force had reached the vicinity of Watertown, N. Y. U.S. and Allied forces counterattacked and, by 28 February 1952, had pushed the Aggressor Force back to his original lodgment area.

First Texas Campaign. On 24 September 1951, Aggressor resorted to nuclear warfare by airdropping an atomic weapon on a U.S. naval convoy in the vicinity of Corpus Christi, Tex. Two days later, Aggressor made airborne and amphibious landings in Texas. Attacking to the north and northeast, Aggressor, by 15 November, had advanced inland as far as San Antonio. In the first days of April 1952, the Aggressor drive was stopped in the Fort Hood, Tex. area. After a battle in which both sides employed tactical nuclear weapons, the U.S. forces routed the invaders and forced Aggressor to withdraw to the Gulf Coast. Most of the Aggressor forces were evacuated to Caribbean bases, but a strong force was left to hold a beachhead in the area south and northeast of Corpus Christi.

CAMPAIGNS OF 1953–55.

Northwest United States Campaign. In early March 1953, Aggressor launched a successful amphibious attack against the west coast of the United States. By late September 1953, Aggressor occupied the States of Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Nevada, Montana, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, part of Colorado, and part of Texas. Aggressor continued his advance until December 1953, and then came to a temporary halt.

Second Texas Campaign. In early 1954, Aggressor resumed the offensive in order to effect a link-up between his invasion force in west Texas and the force in the Corpus Christi beachhead area. U.S. forces frustrated this effort and subsequently launched a counteroffensive, which forced Aggressor to order a general withdrawal.

Establishment of California Lodgment Area. By March 1954, Aggressor troops in the northwestern United States had evacuated the mainland and taken up strong positions on the chain of islands running along the west coast of Canada. In the general area of San Francisco, Aggressor retained a strong defensive position, which constituted his last remaining beachhead on the west coast of the U.S. mainland.

Third Carolina Campaign. In April 1954, the Aggressor High Command launched an attack from positions in the Carolina lodgment area to capture nuclear manufacturing and storage installations in the Carolinas. After two months of fighting, Aggressor was driven back to his Carolina beachhead.

Southern Liberation Campaign. Turning his attention from the American theater, Aggressor in May 1954, attacked the nations south of the Homeland. This operation, known as the "Southern Liberation Campaign," was launched on the pretext that the security of the Aggressor Nation had been endangered and its national honor violated. Under the personal direction of Emilio Grandafrato, head of the "Triumvirate," Army Groups West and East conducted a two-pronged offensive, which resulted in victory over the opposing forces. Support rendered by Aggressor naval units, including naval infantry (marines), greatly enhanced the prestige of the naval arm.

The presence of the Aggressor Army in the subjugated nations enabled native Circle Trigonists to seize top governmental positions and request annexation by and incorporation into the Aggressor nation. This request was generously granted. Once the annexed territories had been pacified, occupation forces furnished by Army Groups West and East were withdrawn. In their place, a new army group, Army Group South, was established to command the Armed Forces in the new territories and to conscript and train recruits from these areas.

Third Texas Campaign. In 1955, Aggressor again made several attempts to enlarge his holdings in the United States. The most successful of these was the expansion of the Texas beachhead to the north and northeast. Aggressor broke out of the Corpus Christi beachhead in January 1955, and, after much hard fighting, succeeded in expanding it eastward to the Mississippi River. By the end of the year, Aggressor occupied the entire coastline of Texas and Louisiana.

CAMPAIGNS OF 1956.

Central United States Campaign. In August 1956, Aggressor attempted to capture the industrial centers of the midwestern United States by launching a general offensive to the north with an army group from the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area. By mid-November, Aggressor had succeeded in reaching a line along the Republican and Kansas Rivers. In early December, U.S. forces launched a successful counteroffensive, which witnessed the employment of nuclear weapons. Aggressor retreated across the southern portion of the United States and, by the end of May 1957, had withdrawn to the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area.

CAMPAIGNS OF 1957–58.

In late 1956, the Aggressor High Command decided to step up the tempo of its offensives against the United States in order to knock its most powerful enemy out of the war and concentrate its efforts against the remainder of the Free World. To that end, Aggressor ground forces in various lodgment areas were augmented and air and naval reinforcements were sent to the American Theater.

First Defense of the Canal Zone. The Aggressor timetable for conquest was delayed by the United States. In May 1957, U.S. forces made amphibious landings on the Atlantic Coast of Panama and air-transported landings on the Pacific Coast of that country. These raids were successful in destroying Aggressor supplies and equipment and in neutralizing staging areas for troops preparing for commitment in the continental United States.

Fourth Carolina Campaign. In late May 1957, U.S. forces attacked the Carolina lodgment area and compressed Aggressor forces into a small beachhead at Georgetown, S. C. Aggressor, by concentrating large air and naval forces in the area, managed to prevent the reduction of this beachhead. At the same time, he mustered an armysize task force in an attempt to retake the lost territory. On 15 July 1957, Aggressor launched an all-out assault, preceded by nuclear attacks on key cities, production centers, and military installations in the area. Simultaneously, Aggressor made amphibious landings near Morehead City and Wilmington, N. C.; Myrtle Beach and Charleston, S. C.; Savannah and Brunswick, Ga. Exploiting the confusion among U.S. forces in the area, Aggressor succeeded in reaching a line NORFOLK, Virginia-CHARLOTTESVILLE, Virginia-BRISTOL, Tennessee-GREENVILLE, South Carolina-MACON, Georgia-TALLAHASSEE, Florida, where he linked up with forces in the Florida lodgment area. On 27 September 1957, U.S. forces launched a coordinated counterattack against Aggressor. By mid-December, the Aggressor force had been badly decimated, and its remnants had been forced to retire to the general area of the Carolinas which they had held prior to May 1957.

Fourth Texas Campaign. On 20 June 1957, U. S. forces containing Aggressor in the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area resumed their attack and forced Aggressor to retreat southwest and south into Mexico. Elements of the Aggressor force were cut off on the Yucatan Peninsula. These Aggressor units conducted a last ditch defense but were unable to retain the Peninsula. The remainder of the Aggressor force was compelled to retreat southeast to the Aggressor occupied Panama Canal Zone. Aggressor tenaciously defended the Canal Zone; however, superior U.S. forces ultimately forced Aggressor to evacuate his battered units to the Antilles Islands.

The recapture of the Panama Canal by U.S. forces, caused Aggressor to shift his attention to the recovery of the Texas-Louisiana lodgment area and, at the same time, attempt to consolidate his holdings along the southeastern portion of the Atlantic Seaboard and the Gulf Coast. On 5 September, he launched an offensive westward from the Carolina lodgment area. Sweeping across the states of the Old South, he captured large segments of the Gulf Coast westward to Galveston-Houston. His gains west of the Mississippi were bounded by a general line GALVESTON-HOUSTON-TYLER, Texas-SHREVEPORT, Louisiana-ELDORADO, Arkansas-GREENVILLE, Mississippi. During the months of February and March 1958, U.S. forces were reinforced and mounted a counteroffensive to drive Aggressor back across the Mississippi River. On 20 April, the U.S. forces, spearheaded by an armored combat command, launched an attack, which cut off Aggressor elements in Texas. Aggressor forces under attack in the northern part of Louisiana were forced to withdraw across the Mississippi River. Offensive action was temporarily impossible as a result of extensive flooding in the Mississippi River area. However, by 2 May, these Aggressor forces had been contained generally east of the Mississippi and south and southwest of a line PADUCAH and LOUISVILLE, Kentucky-KNOXVILLE, Tennessee-ATLANTA and SAVANNAH, Georgia. A large U.S. force remained in southern Alabama and was resupplied by sea. The Aggressor forces cut off in Texas were reinforced with units from the Antilles and began expansion of the lodgment area. By July 1958, Aggressor succeeded in recapturing the original Texas-Louisiana lodgment area and pushed inland to the vicinity of Waco, Texas.

Northwest Pacific Coast Campaign. During the late part of 1957, Aggressor in an attempt to secure a strong foothold on the Northwest Pacific Coast, launched an invasion of Washington State from the chain of islands along the west coast of Canada. By 4 May 1958, Aggressor aided by NERONO nuclear rockets was able to seize several air bases in Washington. The capture of these bases enabled Aggressor to follow up with a rapid exploitation. The exploiting force was spearheaded by armor followed by mechanized units. The apparent objective of the Aggressor attack was to secure a foothold across the Columbia River preparatory to seizing ports in the Seattle-Portland area. U.S. forces began an immediate counterattack and contained Aggressor at the Columbia River. Supported by air strikes and nuclear weapons, the U.S. force pushed Aggressor to the north. By 10 May 1958, Aggressor had been forced into a hurried retreat and suffered heavy losses. Aggressor had been driven back to his original base of operations by 15 May 1958. Subsequently, he evacuated the islands and returned the bulk of his forces to the Homeland. Small contigents were transferred to the Aleutian Islands Chain.

Second Alaskan Campaign. In mid-1957, Aggressor made plans for an invasion of Alaska, which provided for an air landing near Fairbanks, a southward drive along Richardson Highway across the Alaskan Range, and a subsequent push toward Anchorage. On 21 January 1958, Aggressor launched airborne nuclear attacks against Seattle, McCord Air Force Base, Elmendorf Air Force Base, Fort Richardson, and Ladd and Eielson Air Force Bases. On 22 and 23 January, Aggressor airborne units seized Fairbanks, Ladd Air Force Base, and Eielson Air Force Base. On 29 January, a reinforced airborne brigade departed from Fairbanks and proceeded along the Alaskan Highway in a southeasterly direction. South of Big Delta, this brigade encountered a reinforced U.S. battle group. After consolidating, the U.S. force counterattacked. Aggressor was confronted with inadequate logistical support and was forced to withdraw. By the end of February, Aggressor had been driven from the Alaskan mainland and retired to his lodgment areas in the Aleutian Islands Chain.

Central European Campaign. No major campaigns had been fought in Europe since the Southern Liberation Campaign. During a three-year unofficial armistice, Aggressor had been able to build up his forces in the Homeland in addition to augmenting his embattled forces overseas. Concurrently with stepping up the tempo of his offensives in the American Theater, Aggressor decided to resume his attacks in Europe in order to drive the United States and its Allies from the continent.

In January 1958, an Aggressor offensive in western Europe accompanied by nuclear missile attacks compelled Allied forces to conduct a general withdrawal. This retrograde move by the Allies caused Aggressor to overextend his supply lines and thereby made Aggressor vulnerable. On 15 February 1958, Allied forces employing numerous nuclear weapons launched a counteroffensive that drove Aggressor back to the original line of departure. The Allies and Aggressor suffered heavy casualities which rendered both forces incapable of further offensive action.

Second Tennessee-Kentucky Campaign. While elements of the Aggressor forces retreated across the Mississippi, during the Fourth Texas Campaign, U.S. forces north of the Ohio River prepared to attack south. This attack was to effect a link-up with the U.S. pocket in Alabama and cut off Aggressor forces east of the Mississippi and west of the Carolinas On 26 April 1958, an airborne assualt was launched on the Clarksville-

Fort Campbell area. United States objectives were to capture the important communications center of Clarksville, capture Aggressor guided missile sites at Fort Campbell, and consolidate in the area preparatory to a link-up with other U.S. forces advancing south from the Ohio River line. The link-up was effected on 21 April. By 10 May, Kentucky was free of Aggressor troops and a deep U.S. salient had been driven into Tennessee.

Middle Atlantic Coast Campaign. In order to relieve the pressure on his forces in Tennessee, Mississippi, northern Alabama, and Georgia, Aggressor, on 15 May 1958, initiated two amphibious and airborne assaults along the Eastern Seaboard supported by NERONO nuclear rockets mounted on amphibious tank chassis. These attacks, executed by a task force consisting of two reinforced armies, were successful. By 17 May, both the Norfolk-Portsmouth area and the Charleston area had been seized. U.S. forces were able to stop Aggressor westward movement by 20 May 1958. Subsequently, a counteroffensive was launched by U.S. forces that pushed Aggressor eastward to the coast. The U.S. forces established killing zones for the employment of nuclear weapons and inflicted heavy losses causing Aggressor to withdraw to his initial beachheads. Aggressor succeeded in maintaining his forces within the confines of the original Carolina lodgment area, but evacuation of his forces at Norfolk-Portsmouth to the St. Lawrence area became necessary. Subsequently, Aggressor forces in Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, and Georgia were destroyed or driven back into the Florida lodgment area.

CAMPAIGNS OF 1959–60.

Second Invasion of Panama Canal Zone. The Aggressor High Command reevaluated its military strategy and determined that recapture of the Panama Canal was essential in its quest for world domination. On 15 February 1959, Aggressor bombarded military installations in the Canal Zone with nuclear and conventional weapons, which caused heavy personnel casualties and equipment losses. Following this preparation, Aggressor Naval Rifle troops launched an amphibious invasion that secured a beachhead in the vicinity of Rio Hato, Panama. Reinforcements of Aggressor Army troops were landed and an attack inland was launched against light U.S. resistance. Panamanian forces were unable to assist in the defense of this area due to other commitments. Aggressor continued his advance toward the Canal Zone and was not halted until a STRAC force arrived to bolster U.S. defenses. Shortly thereafter U.S. forces assumed the offensive, which decimated the Aggressor invasion force. The swift arrival of STRAC units in Panama was not expected by Aggressor. Therefore, his force was defeated before he could obtain reinforcements. Aggressor personnel able to evade capture, escaped to the jungle or took refuge in homes of Circle Trigon Party members and Aggressor sympathizers.

Third Alaskan Campaign. Following Aggressor's withdrawal to the Aleutian Islands lodgment area in February 1958, immediate action was initiated to refit and train Task Force "Aleutians" for future operations on the mainland. During December 1958, airborne elements of Task Force "Aleutians" launched an airborne assault on the Fairbanks, Ladd AFB and Eielson AFB area. Aggressor forces established an airhead and airlifted reinforcements for the mainland offensive. In late January 1959, Aggressor launched an attack along the Alaskan Railroad in an effort to seize the Fort Richardson-Elmendorf-Anchorage complex. Aggressor's progress was slow due to difficult terrain and a tenacious defense by U.S. forces. In mid-February 1959, Aggressor forces encountered a reinforced battle group in the vicinity of Talkeetna-Sunshine-Montana. After heavy fighting Aggressor was compelled to retreat to the protection of the Ladd-Eielson airhead by late February 1959. Replacements and equipment were received from the Aleutians in preparation for forthcoming operations. During the Fall of 1959, Aggressor airborne elements launched a ground attack from the airhead against Big Delta and Fort Greeley. Previously prepared positions in the vicinity of Tok Junction and Rapids enabled U.S. forces to eventually contain the Aggressor offensive. In late January 1960, Aggressor launched an assault on U.S. elements in the Rapids area. U.S. forces blocked the Aggressor advance in the vicinity of Gulkana. This action forced Aggressor to move east through the Lake Louise-Gulkana Basin area. On 10 February 1960, Aggressor was opposed by a reinforced battle group in the vicinity of Lake Louise. Aggressor subsequently withdrew to the Delta Junction area occupying previously prepared defensive positions to protect the approaches into the Fairbanks-Ladd-Eielson airhead. Both U.S. and Aggressor forces suffered heavy personnel losses in this operation as a result of combat and severe weather conditions, thus temporarily halting offensive action.

Third Northwest United States Campaign. During January 1959, Aggressor invaded the Alaskan mainland. Simultaneously, an airborne assault was made in the Lethbridge, Alberta area and subsequently an airhead was established. After consolidating Alaskan mainland positions, Aggressor launched a drive southward which effected a link-up with Aggressor forces in the Lethbridge airhead by mid-April 1959. By 28 April, Aggressor advanced as far south as Spokane, Washington. On 2 May, Aggressor continued offensive operations to the west with the objective of seizing Portland, Oreg. Destruction of bridges across the lower Columbia and Snake Rivers by U.S. forces prompted Aggressor's main axis of advance to be made further north along Highway 10. The Aggressor force crossed the Columbia River at Wenatchee and Vantage. Aggressor then proceeded south and captured Ellensburg, Washington. On 9 May, Aggressor encountered U.S. forces in defensive positions in the Yakima, Washington area. U.S. forces were able to slow the Aggressor advance; however, they were forced to withdraw to preplanned secondary defensive positions. On 21 May, U.S. forces launched a counterattack. This, coupled with his inability to maintain his supply lines along the ALCAN Highway, caused Aggressor to withdraw northward into British Columbia by the end of May 1959.

Third Panama Canal Zone Invasion. Aggressor still considered the Panama Canal as an important objective in his military strategy. Therefore, shortly after Circle Trigonists overthrew a neighboring government, Aggressor stationed troops in that country. In early March 1960, Aggressor launched an attack southeast into Panama. Aggressor's main axis of advance followed the Pan American Highway toward the Canal Zone. Only light resistance was encountered by Aggressor until he reached the Rio Hato area, where STRAC and South American reinforcements halted the Aggressor offensive. By mid-March, the outnumbered Aggressor force was compelled to retreat to the northwest. The Aggressor invasion was completely doomed when large numbers of his troops were striken with malaria. Aggressor remnants were forced to withdraw into the neighboring country by late March 1960. Following this defeat Aggressor evacuated his forces to the Antilles Islands.

Second California Campaign. On 26 February 1960, Aggressor launched an offensive to the south from his California lodgment area to capture the Los Angeles and San Diego port facilities and thereby enlarge the lodgement area. The attack was spearheaded by mechanized and tank units equipped with a new type of medium tank, which was combat-tested during the Second California Campaign. By 1 March, Aggressor forces reached the line FRESNO-BISHOP-TONOPAH. This offensive was supported by extensive use of chemical agents delivered by air and artillery. Aggressor then continued southward and by 11 March had advanced to a line running generally through SAN FERNANDO-MUROC LAKE-LAS VEGAS before being halted. On 13 March, the U.S. forces launched a strong counteroffensive employing small yield nuclear weapons and chemical agents. Aggressor initiated a delaying action and began a general withdrawal to the lodgment area. U.S. forces received reinforcements from the Camp Irwin area and by 20 March had driven Aggressor back into his original lodgment area.

During 1957 and early 1958, elements frequently harassed U.S. troops patrolling the demilitarized zone on the periphery of the lodgment area. Occasional raids into U.S. territory were conducted during this period. Retaliation by U.S. forces eventually caused Aggressor to halt these activities. In October 1958, Army Group West (Forward) was designated headquarters for all Aggressor forces in the Caribbean, Texas-Louisiana, Florida, and Carolina lodgment areas. In December 1958, units located in the Carolina lodgment area were alerted for movement to the Aleutain Islands. Replacement divisions from the Homeland began to arrive in South Carolina in January 1959, and by 1 February 1960 the movement of all units had been completed. In order to strengthen his foothold along the Atlantic Coast, Aggressor deemed it necessary to consolidate his Florida-South Carolina lodgment areas. In early May 1959, an attack was launched to the north from the Florida area. Combat-tested troops from the Caribbean were used to spearhead the attack. Simultaneously, an attack southward was launched from the Carolina lodgment area. By late May 1959, Aggressor had consolidated these lodgment areas. Aggressor then controlled the area extending from the tip of Florida to Myrtle Beach, South Carolina (note map in fig. 1). In January 1960, the XXIII Rifle Corps with all of its components was withdrawn from Florida and replaced by several new divisions. In March 1960, Army Group West (Forward) was reorganized and redesignated Army Group KARIBO. Control of Aggressor forces in the Antilles Islands was retained by Army Group KARIBO, however, it relinquished control of units in the Texas-Louisiana area to Army Group GOLFO. Forces in the Florida-Georgia-South Carolina lodgment area were placed under control of Army Group KARIBO (Forward). Army Group KARIBO (Forward) is an element of Army Group KARIBO. Conducted extensive training exercises, in addition to performing occupation duties in 1956 and 1957. Elements participated in the Fourth Carolina Campaign in December 1957 and the Northwest Pacific Coast Campaign in April 1958. Components of the Army Group seized several strategic areas during the Middle Atlantic Coast Campaign, but were forced to withdraw by superior U.S. forces to the St. Lawrence area. In mid-1958, Army Group East (Forward) rehabilitated its subordinate elements. In February 1959, with its major elements at full strength, Army Group East (Forward) planned a limited objective operation to enlarge and strengthen the St. Lawrence lodgment area. In early March 1959, a surprise attack was launched southwest from the original lodgment area. The outnumbered U.S. and Canadian forces were compelled to yield ground until reinforcements arrived. Therefore, within a few days, Aggressor was able to secure the area extending as far southwest as Portland, Maine and Quebec, Canada. The reinforced U.S. and Canadian forces succeeded in holding Aggressor northeast of a line between these two key cities. On this line Aggressor prepared extensive defense positions to retain the newly captured territory as part of his lodgment area. In March 1959, the St. Lawrence lodgment area consisted of Newfoundland, Anticosti Island, Nova Scotia and adjacent islands, New Brunswick Province, a portion of Quebec Province, and the northeast half of the State of Maine. Army Group East (Forward) was reorganized and redesignated Army Group ST. LAURENCO in March 1960. Subordinate to Regional Command ATLANTIKO.
